Antje van de Statie (Maria Hubertina Hendrix)

AN ICON FROM AND FOR THE CITY

MARIA HUBERTINA HENDRIX (1877 - 1936),

known to (almost) everyone in Weert simply as Antje vanne Staasie, and outside Weert as Antje van de Statie, is an icon of and for the city.

In 1897, she entered the service of the then proprietor of the station restaurant, Madame Emonds, and in 1911 she took over the business herself. For many train passengers, Antje was the symbol that they had arrived in Weert.

With her hair tied in a bun, wearing a long skirt and high shoes, she walked along the platform carrying a tray full of vlaaitjes (pies), selling them to travellers as she called out: "vlaaitjes, gentlemen, vlaaitjes, gentlemen!"

Nodding kindly to the left and right, she moved from carriage to carriage, offering the delicacy wrapped in tissue paper.
